Collection and storage of Clinical Trials Data

Security of data is of critical importance to TCR, and significant effort is put into ensuring it is kept safe and confidential. Data collected by our tools is stored in an encrypted database within the UK N3 network. Access is only granted to approved TCR staff, Public Health Staff, or approved Clinical Research Staff. This access is logged as are any changes or additions to the data. The nature of the data that is collected is described in the Clinical Trial Protocol or Practice Data Collection Agreement. Only the information described in these Agreements or Protocols is collected. The period of retention of the data is also determined by the Agreements and Protocols. After this time the data is removed securely and completely to NHS standards.

Collection and storage of Clinical Audit Data

Data collected for clinical audit is either aggregated data or de-identified data. This data is stored in a restricted access database within the UK. Individuals cannot be identified from this data.

Marketing by third parties

We do not give your personal data to anyone outside of TCR (with the exception of the approved Clinical Trial individuals).

Security

We use standard industry practices, including encryption, passwords and physical security to protect your personal information against unauthorised access and disclosure
